A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

I'd like you to meet nine of Disney's biggest stars. What, you don't recognize them? Well, that's because these stars are animators. And, although their faces may not be familiar, I guarantee that you've enjoyed their performances many times in movie theaters and right here on The Disney Channel.

You see, these individuals have created such memorable Disney characters as Ariel and Sebastian from The Little Mermaid, Roger and Jessica Rabbit from Who Framed Roger Rabbit, Oliver and Dodger from Oliver & Company, and Bernard, Bianca, and Marahute the Eagle from The Rescuers Down Under. And they brought these characters to life using nothing more than some ink and paint, plus an incredible amount of talent and imagination.

I have seen them at work and it is truly amazing. They surround themselves with models and drawings of whatever character they're working on. And, by their desks, each and every one of them has the same invaluable tool: a mirror. As they work through a scene, they will literally act out the part in front of the mirror, studying their facial expressions as a model for the drawings. So, when you see an animator's creation on the screen, in a very real way you're seeing the animator, himself, up there as well.

Currently, these nine animators are working on one of the classic love stories of all time: Beauty and the Beast, our next Disney animated feature film.

To add to the enchantment of this timeless tale, the film will feature songs and music by Howard Ashman and Alan Menken, the same team that composed the music for The Little Mermaid.

At The Walt Disney Studios, we are all extremely excited as our nine stars of animation put the finishing touches on Beauty and the Beast. We eagerly look forward to sharing this 30th Disney animated feature with you when it premieres in theaters on November 22.

California Success Story

With the success of Disneyland, Walt Disney began to think of a second park. Walt wanted an area on the other side of the country which had a pleasant year-round climate and thought of Florida. After studying surveys, Walt decided that the Orlando area would offer the best opportunities for a new theme park. A total of 27,000 acres was purchased southwest of the city.

The Announcement

Walt unveiled his new project at the Cherry Plaza Hotel in Orlando on November 15, 1965. He even dropped hints of a "model community, a City of Tomorrow." But Walt's death a year later caused confusion. Roy Disney was 73 years old and ready to retire, but he remained on the job to see that Walt Disney World was built. The problems of constructing a "City of Tomorrow," called EPCOT, had not been fully addressed by Walt, so Roy decided, "Let's build our Magic Kingdom first."

October 1, 1971

After a massive construction project, The Walt Disney World Magic Kingdom opened. Around it was something Walt Disney had dreamed about in California, but never had—"the blessing of size." In size the park was similar to Disneyland, but there was more —two luxury hotels, golf courses, lakes and lagoons offering fishing and water sports, and a campground. Within a few years came a shopping village with its own hotel plaza, an additional golf course, a golf resort hotel, a water park, and many other facilities for guests. Roy Disney was on hand to dedicate his brother's dream. He died two months later.

The Future Is Now

The Florida park was an immediate hit, and soon it was felt the time had come to pursue EPCOT, an Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow. With the help of advisors, Disney designers worked out plans for a park encompassing Future World and World Showcase. From the announcements in 1975 to the opening in October, 1982, there was a frenzy of activity on the Florida property. While the first phase of Walt Disney World had cost $440 million, costs on EPCOT reached $1 billion. The name became EPCOT Center as designers realized that the whole Orlando property was the "experimental prototype community."

New Attractions

The Magic Kingdom had opened with some attractions similar to those at Disneyland, but also with its own unique attractions. The Country Bear Jamboree first made its appearance there, as did the Hall of Presidents. Space Mountain debuted in 1975 (two years before its arrival at Disneyland), as did the Carousel of Progress, which had moved out from Disneyland. Big Thunder Mountain Railway was unveiled in 1980. And now, Splash Mountain is rising in Frontierland.

EPCOT Center has added new pavilions dedicated to Horizons, the Seas, and Wonders of Life; Morocco and Norway joined World Showcase. A whole new park opened in 1989, a real, working movie studio at The Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park. Pleasure Island brought nighttime entertainment for grownups, and Typhoon Lagoon a water adventure park.

Twenty Years of Happiness

It took less than five years for Walt Disney World to welcome its 50-millionth visitor. The 100millionth arrived in 1979, the 200-millionth in 1985, and the 300-millionth in 1989. Walt Disney World has become a unique entertainment and vacation center much grander than that ever envisioned by Walt Disney. But these first 20 years have only been a prologue. In the original Disney Channel special Walt Disney World: Past, Present and Future, you'll see the plans for Walt Disney World's future.

Pet Pointers PICKING A PET FOR YOUR FAMILY

Sooner or later, almost every child asks the question that plants a parent firmly on the fence: Can I have a pet? So it's only sensible that before answering "no" or "yes," parents should carefully consider whether and when to make an animal part of the family. Should over-worked parents say yes to a pet even before a child is old enough to be of much help taking care of it? How much help should you realistically expect from children, no matter their ages? What kind of pet makes the most sense for your family? And perhaps most importantly, why should families with limited resources of time and money introduce yet another complication to already over-complicated lives?

The answer to the last question, at least, is clear. A growing body of expert opinion and scientific research show that pets are good for children in all sorts of ways. "Having a pet can help a child to develop a sense of self-esteem." says Lynette A. Hart, Ph.D., who directs the Human-Animal Program at the University of California, Davis School of Veterinary Medicine. "When children do something to an animal, it reacts. This reaction gives children experience in learning that what they do has an impact on others."

Taking care of pets also provides children with a look at what it means to nurture another living creature, an experience that's absent for growing numbers of children who have one—or no—siblings. Pets may even help children make friends, recent research suggests. At least children with pets are more socially competent and confident than kids who don't have them.

Parents who don't already have a pet often decide to wait until children are seven or eight before getting one. But a recent study of 188 Kansas State University students suggests that if one of your reasons is to instill a life-long love of animals, you should probably get a pet before your child is six. Children who had a pet before age six were much more likely to form a close attachment to the animal than those who got their first pet after age 10, the study showed. And those who bonded to pets in early childhood were much more likely to own pets when they grew up.

As for expecting a child age six or younger to take care of a pet—to feed, walk, groom and clean up after the animal—Hart recommends parents be realistic. "The mother is the one who usually winds up assuming the main responsibility for the pet," she says. Even children much older than six may need parents' help to be responsible. Don't take care of a

Me and My Dog MARC PRICE AND TYLER OF TEEN WIN, LOSE OR DRAW

"I never had a dog when I was a kid," says Marc Price, co-host of Teen Win, Lose or Draw and a standup comedian. "I'd use all those arguments that kids use—'Please please please let me have a dog. I'll come home from school at lunchtime and feed him and play with him."

Fans of Teen Win, Lose or Draw will already know that Marc Price's co-host is his dog Tyler. "I live in a guest house in Los Angeles," Price says. "My front neighbors are wonderful people—they're third generation show business like me, and they love animals. There is an emu, a goat, and ducks. It's also sort of a home for wayward animals. One day, the people who had Tyler had to give her up, so they left her with my neighbors. I walked in, and there was Tyler asleep on the sofa. 'Who is this,' I said, and Tyler came up and gave me a big kiss. You couldn't get us apart after that. I said to her, 'Tyler, babe, just stick with me and I'll make you a star.'

"It made sense to me to have Tyler on Teen Win, Lose or Draw, and it just worked out. I love the show, I'm proud of it, and Tyler is the perfect co-host. She just plays a dog. Of course now she's demanding her own dressing room."

The only drawback is Price's busy career. "I really miss her when I'm on the road," Price says, "and I know she misses me. But we did both co-host a new educational film on the environment. And we spend a lot of time together. We both love camping." Price adds, "Tyler is wonderful, having her has changed my life."

IS CHOCOLATE MILK O.K.?

Parents and school officials have long debated whether chocolate milk should be regularly offered children as part of their meals. The worry is that chocolate milk might replace part of the meal. reducing its overall nutritional value. A team of nutrition researchers from New York University studied the milk drinking habits of 60 sixth graders during lunchtime. They found that kids do opt for chocolate milk if it's offered, and they drink more of it than they do of regular milk. Interestingly, the total calorie intake and percentage of fat calories were actually reduced in the meals eaten with chocolate milk. and the children who drank chocolate milk also got more calcium and other nutrients because of the greater volume of milk consumed.

pet for an older child, recommends Dr. Benjamin Spock, and don't threaten that the pet will be history if things don't change. Simply remind the child, firmly, that it's time—right now—to feed or walk the pet or change its cage. In other words, Spock advises parents to make sure the pet gets taken care of, but not to do it themselves.

How much care a pet needs depends partly on what kind of pet it is. And as luck would have it for harried parents, the highest maintenance pet is also the most popular-the dog. All dogs are not equal, of course, when it comes to their suitability for kids, as Hart and her veterinarian-husband Benjamin L. Hart explain in their book, The Perfect Puppy: How to Choose Your Dog by Its Behavior. In the book the Harts construct behavior profiles of 56 of the most popular American Kennel Club breeds, from Afghan hounds to Yorkshire terriers. The profiles are based on the assessments of vets and dog show judges.

In families with children, two traits are particularly important, Ben Hart explains. One is the animal's tendency to exert dominance over its owner. Among the breeds ranked lowest in this trait are golden retrievers, collies and bloodhounds; among those ranked highest are Afghan hounds, Siberian huskies and fox terriers. "Half of the dogs in shelters are there for problem behavior," Hart points out, "and the number one problem is aggression." So it makes sense, first of all, to select a breed that's unlikely to be aggressive or try to exert dominance over people, including small children.

The second key trait is a dog's tendency to snap at children. "However hard we try to train young children not to abuse or pester a dog until it becomes irritable, we cannot count on a child always following instructions," the Harts write. In general, small dogs are more likely to snap at children than large dogs, Ben Hart notes.

"For kids, stay away from terriers and schnauzers as a rule."

What carefully selecting a breed won't help with, of course, is the bottom-line investment of attention, time and energy a dog-any dog-requires. Parents unable or unwilling to devote the time and attention might consider a cat, not usually thought to be a good "children's" pet. "Cats usually aren't too interactive with children," notes Ben Hart. "Among the more outgoing breeds are the Burmese, the Siamese, the domestic short hair. Still, kids should be older, and you should get the animal as a kitten, so it will get used to being picked up and handled."

If a cat isn't in the cards, think about acquiring a rabbit, a guinea pig or a bird. "I sort of like rabbits for apartments and smaller homes," says Lynette Hart. "They do tend to chew electrical cords, but they can be litter trained, and they don't spray, bark or scratch furniture." As for guinea pigs, Hart counts among their many virtues as children's pets that they're cute, cuddly and playful, yet they don't skitter around like hamsters, and they're not as easily lost or squashed. "Birds are very popular, too," says Hart. "But they tend to attach themselves to a single person, and may take a dislike to other people—which can be a problem in a family pet."

Despite all the benefits and options, your answer to the question almost every child asks-"Can I have a pet?"-may be "no." Allergies, space constraints, time demands and financial considerations may all come into play. But whether or not children have pets of their own, they can still learn to appreciate animals. Some ways parents can help them develop a sense of compassion and understanding for other species include visiting the zoo or a farm, going on a nature hike, reading books or magazines about animals, or watching television programs that explore animal behavior.

Shopping for Kids SOME SHOULDS FOR SHOES

Just watching your crawling baby get vertical—and walk—seems to inspire parents to seek and find the best shoes, almost as a symbolic trophy to celebrate the new skill. But do kids benefit from the shoes parents buy? And as children mature, just what factors should parents be considering when they shop for shoes? Of all the things parents buy for their children, shoes may be the most poorly understood.

Typically, parents assume newly walking children need shoes that offer good support, but that's not true, says Michael Goldberg, M.D., chairman of the Department of Orthopedics at the New England Medical Center in Boston. He points out that feet have little to do with walking, a skill that is controlled

The idea of giving children well-supporting shoes started years ago, Goldberg says, when people noticed that children are born with what appears to be the absence of the foot's arch. "It was taught that you need to support the arch to have a stronger adult foot, but it turns out that children develop their arch as their ligaments tighten," he points out. Studies show 85 percent develop a normal arch by age seven.

When parents buy shoes, support to the feet shouldn't be an issue. What is important is comfort, safety and suitability to what the child will be doing. "The purpose of shoes is to protect the feet from abnormal terrain," Goldberg observes. "They should be appropriate for a particular type of activity, such as ballet or tennis."

What is tough with children, though, is achieving a good fit, both because you're dealing with a foot that is growing and changing shape, and because children are usually less capable of describing how the shoe feels and where it hurts. Fitting a shoe properly has also become more difficult recently, because more and more shoes are not available in half-sizes and a variety of widths. The more flexible a shoe, the easier it is to fit, says Goldberg. And the best time to get new shoes, he says, is when the child complains that the shoe hurts.

As for sports, Goldberg likes sneakers that fit well better than popular sport-specific models. Cleats, pumps and spikes have not been proven to enhance the child's performance, he points out.

Goldberg says that in today's society, shoes are designed more as an art form than as foot protection. To avoid discomfort and to reduce the chance of needing foot surgery later in life, Goldberg suggests parents ask themselves if the shoes they are considering buying for their children—and for themselves—are really shaped like a foot.

A SPECIAL SNACK FROM LINDA McCARTNEY'S VEGETARIAN COOKBOOK

Paul and Linda McCartney have been vegetarians for over two decades, eschewing animal protein save for eggs and cheeses and other dairy products. Linda McCartney, an internationally recognized photographer and an environmentalist, is also a superb cook—and now the author of Home Cooking: Quick, Easy and Economical Vegetarian Dishes for Today (Arcade Publishing; Little, Brown and Company; $24.95). Not only does McCartney's book contain recipes to tempt the most ardent of carnivores, it also features a wonderful section on how to involve all family members—regardless of age—in the joys of home cooking.

PIZZA BREAD

A quick and tasty snack that young people love to make for themselves.

- 4 slices whole wheat bread
- 1-2 teaspoons oregano
- 1-2 garlic cloves, crushed
- 4 teaspoons olive oil
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 cup cheddar cheese, grated
- 1. Toast the bread lightly.
- 2. Sprinkle with the oregano, garlic and oil.
- 3. Spread the toasts with the tomato paste, then add the cheese.
- 4. Place the pizzas under a hot grill until the cheese is bubbly and lightly golden. Serve immediately with a little extra oregano sprinkled on top if desired.

10 minutes to make. Good source of protein, B group vitamins, and calcium.

IS YOUR CHILD GIFTED?

What does it mean to say that a child is "gifted?" How soon can parents expect to see the first signs of unusually high intelligence or artistry, even genius, in youngsters? And what can be done to nurture a child's gifts—whatever those gifts might turn out to be?

Parents shouldn't be shy if they suspect their child is gifted, dismissing their hunch as wishful thinking. One study suggests that chances are better than even that the parents are right. Over the years, researchers at the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Brunswick, New Jersey, have surveyed hundreds of parents who've contacted the school's Gifted Child Clinic about having their three-, four- and five-year-olds tested.

Even though only about two percent of the population is gifted—defined as having an I.Q. of 132 or higher—about 60 percent of the preschoolers referred to the clinic test out as super smart, says psychologist Barbara Louis, one of the researchers. Furthermore, parents of children who are, in fact, gifted tend to say different kinds of things about their children than parents of average children.

"Knowing the alphabet and numbers are definitely not good indicators of which children are really gifted," says Louis. "Neither is an early interest in books, or early reading." Instead, parents of kids who turn out to be gifted are most likely to mention two other characteristics: memory and abstract thinking.

"Almost all the parents of gifted children tell stories about how the child remembered something that happened only once, a year ago," says Louis. "Or they mention an uncanny memory for places, like one three-year-old who was reported to have remembered which way to turn at an intersection to get to a friend's house, when he'd been there only once, several months before."

A gifted child's precocious command of abstract thinking frequently shows up in vocabulary. "Many very young gifted kids understand the meaning of abstract words, like 'joy' or 'sadness,'" says Louis. "And their parents report that when they hear new words, they invariably ask what they mean, then use them later in new contexts, showing the ability to generalize what they've learned."

But what does it mean to say that a child is gifted? According to Michael Lewis, M.D., who directs the New Jersey clinic, there are two schools of thought. "Some people take it to mean a general intellectual ability, usually measured by I.Q.," says Dr. Lewis. In this view, a single "g factor" (general intelligence) enables those who possess it to excel at whatever they do, providing, of course, they apply themselves to master the necessary skills.

But a growing number of researchers, including Harvard University psychologist Howard Gardner and Yale University researcher Robert Sternberg. believe that there are different kinds of intelligence, rather than a single "g factor." In other words, extraordinary ability in one specific area does not guarantee the same in other fields. Among the specific areas of intelligence that researchers mention are language. mathematics, music, spatial design, interpersonal or social skills, and personal insight.

"Someone may be gifted in music but be terrible in mathematics, or geography, or just may not have much basic common sense when it comes to dealing with other people," Lewis says. In A second early sign of giftedness, fact, after working with many according to Lewis, is a baby gifted children, Lewis and others who's extremely attentive, and spends a lot of time looking around, seemingly studying the environment, and listening to what's going on. A third sign is earlier-than-average development of anxiety about strangers-as early as four or five months of age rather than eight months. This may be a sign of accelerated cognitive development, Lewis notes. The final sign is an unusually large vocabulary by the age of one. "At this stage, most kids would be saying words like Mamma and Dadda," says Lewis, "but the gifted child would also say > words like knife or stone." These four early signs of giftedness often occur together, Lewis notes, adding that they're by no means fail-safe indicators. Some kids who sleep like angels or who don't say a word at the age of one year may turn out to be brighter than the infant insomniacs who talk circles around them. "Whatever potential for giftedness a baby brings into the world must be developed," says Lewis.

In general, Lewis and other experts on child development agree, parents should provide a wide variety of interesting educational experiences and opportunities for children, then watch closely to see if the child enjoys them or not. If not, don't force the issue. "The point is to provide the opportunity, not to put the child under any pressure," Lewis says, citing David Elkind's work on the disadvantages of hurrying children. "Follow the child's lead," Lewis advises, "If he's interested in dinosaurs, but not arithmetic, then teach math using dinosaurs."

If you think your child may be gifted, have him or her tested. Like the New Brunswick clinic. many facilities make this testing available on a sliding-fee scale. "Recognizing that a child is gifted may help parents to avoid all sorts of problems," says Lewis. For example, parents commonly try to distract young children, moving their attention away from objects or activities the parents don't want them to touch or to do. This tactic doesn't usually work with young gifted kids, however, who have powers of concentration rare for their age. Unaware of their gifts, parents may think the problem is the child's "one-track mind" and discipline him or her for being stubborn and persistent.

Focus on what your child does well, not on what he or she does poorly or could do better. Being highly critical or demanding is more likely to reduce self-esteem than it is to inspire high performance in children, whether they're gifted or not. And no matter how smart or talented a child turns out to be, he won't be able to shine unless he believes he can.

agree that some children fit into a category that sounds like a paradox: gifted children who have learning disabilities. One threeyear-old girl did as well as an average nine-year-old when it came to reproducing complex drawings of geometrical figures, solving spatial puzzles and mazes, and performing other visual tasks. But her speech was well below normal, at the level of a two-vear-old.

How soon can parents tell if a child is gifted?

Sooner than most people think, according to Lewis, who points to four signs of giftedness that emerge before a child is a year old. The first sign is something that drives most new parents to distraction: a baby who doesn't want or need much sleep.

"They don't sleep for long stretches of time," says Lewis, "and they tend to resist napping."

Walt Disney Records PARACHUTE EXPRESS

Members of The Disney Channel family won't be surprised that Parachute Express, that unique group of children's performers whose specials and music videos currently air as part of Music Box, describe themselves as "the Beatles of children's music." Long the cornerstone of the acclaimed Gymboree music and play programs, the work of Donny Becker, Janice Hubbard and Stephen Michael Schwartz interweaves musical styles ranging from folk to rock to R&B, resulting in striking compositions and harmonies.

This September 10, Parachute Express releases its new album, Happy to Be Here, on Walt Disney Records' Music Box Artist series label. (Three prior albums are also available from Walt Disney Records.) The sounds of Happy to Be Here range from the funk-based "Smooth Moving Boogie Express" to the lyrical "The Garden of Mr. Bell." And fans should take note that Parachute Express will be launching a nation-wide tour beginning September 14. And of course, subscribers will be able to see the group's new music video on The Disney Channel and discover firsthand why L.A. Parents Magazine chose Parachute Express as one of 1990's Superstars of Children's Music.

As of July 29, sending gifts for friends and family—no matter what the age—has been made easier and more fun thanks to Disney Express. Just dial 1–(800)–8–HAPPY–8 to order any or all of five Disney gift packages for immediate or future delivery anywhere in the U.S.

Each Disney gift package comes in an extra-large gift box decorated with original Disney character art. Coordinated tissue paper and a gift box seal add to the occasion—as does the unique collection of Disney products inside. And there's a perfect Disney Gift Box for everyone.

For newborns, there's a "New Birth" box. For girls three to seven, there's "The Little Mermaid Under the Sea" gift box. Young chefs will love "Mickey and Minnie In The Kitchen," and for boys (three to seven), there's a "Mickey Sports Fun" package. And adults of all ages will love the "I Love Mickey" gift box. Disney Express packages are available for $29.95,* plus shipping and handling charges of $4.75, with sevento 10-day delivery. (Gift packages can be shipped via Federal Express, to arrive within three business days, for an additional $4.25.)

* Plus sales tax where applicable.

New Series MORNING & AFTERNOON

Beginning October 7, three new series join The Disney Channel's morning and afternoon lineup. The Disney animated series Gummi Bears will air weekdays at 8:00 a.m. and at 3:30 p.m. Jump, Rattle and Roll features the live-action adventures of your host Sam and his robot pal DECKS—plus there are three cartoon adventures in each episode, featuring Yogi Bear, Huckleberry Hound, Auggie Doggie and Doggie Daddie, and more.

Jump, Rattle and Roll airs weekday mornings at 6:30 a.m., afternoons at 4:30 p.m. and also on Saturday mornings at 8:30 a.m. And fans of New Kids On The Block will be happy to hear that their animated series will air on The Disney Channel on Saturday mornings at 9:00—each episode including clips of New Kids concert performances. In addition to these three new series, Under the Umbrella Tree and Lunchbox will feature new episodes in October.

The Magical World of Disney HERBIE, HAYLEY & COSBY

The Love Bug goes bananas trying to race to Brazil; Hayley Mills plays twin moms confronting triple teen trouble; and Bill Cosby plays the Devil in three classic comedies on The Magical World of Disney in September and October. On September 8, Herbie Goes Bananas—and off to Brazil—in the fourth and final film to star the Love Bug. On September 29, Hayley Mills and Barry Bostwick star in Parent Trap III. And on October 27—in time for Halloween—Bill Cosby is the Devil and Elliott Gould his unwilling henchman in The Devil and Max Devlin.

Meryl Streep is at her luminous best as Karen von Blixen in Out of Africa. The winner of five Academy Awards, including Best Picture, Out of Africa premieres on The Disney Channel on September 7.

The preparations are under way for the 2nd annual gala presentation of The American Teacher Awards. The Emmy-winning production team of Smith-Hemion, who created last year's Emmy-nominated award show, are again producing the program.

Teacher selection is now complete, with three instructors in each of 12 different areas of education having been selected for American Teacher Awards. You'll meet them at the awards ceremony—and in the weeks following The American Teacher Awards, The Disney Channel presents a brand new season of teacher profiles, featuring all 36 teachers, with The Disney Channel Salutes

On October 20, Francis Albert returns to The Disney Channel with the premiere of The Main Event: Frank Sinatra in Concert. This 1974 concert special features

Ol' Blue Eyes performing "My Way" (when did he do it any other way?) and "My Kind of Town (Chicago Is)." And on October 27, Sunday Night Showcase presents a very special encore performance of Aretha Franklin: Queen of Soul.

The Best of Hollywood FROM THE WILD WEST TO THE HIGH SEAS

It's John Wayne's finest film role: he plays the embittered Ethan Edwards, a one-time Confederate officer who crisscrosses the West in search of his niece, a captive of the Comanche who destroyed her family. The film is John Ford's bleakest-and best -Western: The Searchers. And it's part of September's festival of great Western films-"oaters" in the parlance of Hollywood. The other films are also topnotch: Escape from Fort Bravo, starring William Holden, Eleanor Parker, and John Forsythe; and Bad Day at Black Rock, with Spencer Tracy as a onearmed war veteran trying to solve a mystery in a small town in the modern West. (The cast of supporting players: Lee Marvin, Ernest Borgnine, and Robert Ryan.)

In October, The Best of Holly-wood presents its "Adventures on the High Seas" festival. Leading off on October 7 is Henry Fonda in one of the signature roles of his career as Mister Roberts. On October 14, Fredric March portrays Christopher Columbus. And on October 21, Cliff Robertson is John F. Kennedy in PT 109, the true-life tale of Kennedy's heroism in the South Pacific during World War II. Which brings us to October 28, and Mutiny on the Bounty with Clark Gable, Franchot Tone and the incomparable Charles Laughton as Captain Bligh. Laughton's performance, one of the truly immortal performances in the history of the silver screen, can best be described as all malice, part ham bone, and pure genius.

Lifepulse, a stunning natural thriller about life on Planet Earth, premieres on Sunday Night Showcase on October 6, at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time).

A boy and his dog: Chips, a recalcitrant shepherd, goes to war with the return of Chips, The War Dog to The Magical World of Disney on October 6.

Roger Rabbit experiences a little Tummy Trouble, the superb animated short subject that precedes Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, which airs on The Disney Channel in September and October. Where's Jessica?

in four two-hour installments, Monday through Thursday at 8:00 p.m. (ET/PT), the miniseries stars Megan Follows as the romantic Anne and Colleen Dewhurst as Marilla Cuthbert of Green Gables Farm. (Each episode will also air on consecutive Sunday afternoons at 4:00 p.m., ET/PT).

Which makes for a perfect warmup for two new episodes of Avonlea. That's right, two episodes that have not yet aired on the Channel: "Dreamer of Dreams" and "Misfits and Miracles."

Tuesday Night MUSICAL NIGHT

In October, The Disney Channel unveils a new evening of themed programming on Tuesdays at 9:00 p.m., ET/PT. (Mystery Night concludes its run in September with four topnotch mysteries including The Thin Man.) Our new Musical Night is devoted to that most American of film genres, the Hollywood musical.

It all begins with Take Me Out to the Ball Game on October 8. A whimiscal musical set at the turn of the century, it was directed by the great Busby Berkeley and stars Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly, and Esther Williams. On October 15, William Powell is the great Florenz Ziegfeld (in heaven yet!) in Vincente Minnelli's 1946 musical Ziegfeld Follies. The cast is a veritable who's who: Judy Garland, Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, Red Skelton, Fanny Brice, Gene Kelly-and more! Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein's musical Show Boat, starring Howard Keel and Ava Gardner, airs October 22. And Gene Kelly and Debbie Reynolds and Donald O'Connor are Singin' in the Rain, that incomparable musical, on October 29.

Own a piece of your favorite animated film. The Cricket Gallery specializes in animation art; the original hand-painted cels created and painted by studio artists and actually used in, or inspired by, the classic cartoons we have come to know and love.

Animation cels are the final step in creating the characters that appear in an animated film. Each matted cel typically measures 16 x 20 inches. Cels are rapidly gaining in popularity as "collectibles" both for the pleasure they give and their recognition as a true American art form.

The Cricket Gallery offers one of the largest selections of animation art from Disney as well as all other major animation studios. Our new 34 page catalog is now available and includes a wide variety of animation art in all price ranges.

pparently, nobody ever told Paul McCartney you can't go home again, so he had to learn the hard way how difficult that simple act can be. Last July, McCartney returned to Liverpool, the grimy English industrial seaport where he and the other Beatles grew up, to play a concert for more than 100,000 of his one-time neighbors.

In the process, Paul McCartney came up with a show—as captured in this intimate special—which reveals a great deal about both himself and his music.

Paul McCartney: Going Home is in no way your typical rock video or concert special. It offers only a couple of full songs, and snatches of a handful more. Instead, the program focuses on McCartney as a workaday rock and roller, albeit one with spectacular means and ambition: Capable of building a hundred thousand seat concert venue when his old hometown proves to have no facility capable of accommodating his full-scale stadium show, a show which had played 102 stadiums around the world the previous year.

Paul explains what's going on with deadpan Beatlesque irony: "We were going to do this little show in Liverpool, but then we thought they should get the full show we'd done around the rest of the world—so we had to hold out until we found a really good, exciting venue." What McCartney means is that he had to be willing to foot the massive construction bill for the facility at King's Dock on the bank of the River Mersey, even though the concert's proceeds went to Liverpool children's charities.

This is not quite the behavior we've learned to expect from McCartney, whose public image is that of the Beatle with a shrewd business mind and a strictly pop sense of public responsibility, the man who wrote an ode in defense of "Silly Love Songs." But here, seeing him often backstage and in dressing room interviews, he seems more relaxed and confident, as if the 18-month world tour that concluded with this return to his roots left him energized instead of exhausted. (Paul McCartney: Going Home also features rare behind-the-scenes footage of McCartney's world tour performances in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.)

This time out, even the music is different—harder, more rocking. In the course of the tour, guitarists, Robbie McIntosh and Hamish Stuart—are joined by a local bagpipe group. Adding a couple of dozen pipes and drummers to the already raucous rock sound make this "Mull" seem even more a contemporary Scottish anthem than the original.

Clearly, McCartney chose Glasgow for his warm-up show (which was also a benefit for local charities) for the most personal reasons: Paul and his family now live most of the year on a Scottish farm. But whatever emotions he might have felt there were overwhelmed by the experience of his return to Liverpool, where he hadn't played a show since his 1979 tour with Wings. The interview footage in Paul McCartney: Going Home, like the music itself, finds McCartney in an unusually reflective, even nostalgic mood, as he compares old days and new, critical perceptions and audience reactions, and discourses upon the relationship of growing up in rough working class surroundings to eventual rock and roll stardom. He's a native son whose roots still show, even after all these years, all that wealth, all those years away. (The Beatles moved from Liverpool to London in the first flush of their success, in 1963, and none of them has ever returned for long.)

The shots of the crowd entering the makeshift stadium under a perfect brilliant blue sky for the show are a tribute to what the Beatles did to liberate not just their hometown but the whole world stylistically, and McCartney feels their appeal to him in a special way because, as he notes, "half of them are my family." (At the press conference before the concert, he's shown greeting old school chums in the crowd from his perch on the podium.)

The press conference offers the second reason for doing a Liverpool show; the arty kids of Britain's nothern cities who might have become the Beatles' successors have been left in the lurch after Britain's boom in the '80s. "There's a kind of movement among people in power to diminish the arts," comments legen-

McCartney finally gave himself permission, 20 years after the dissolution of his old group, to sing Beatles songs. This immediately gave his show a massive increase in quality (as it would have done for anyone's). But the McCartney of 1990 harkened back not only to childhood roots in Liverpool but to his initial music love affair—with rock & roll itself.

Paul McCartney: Going Home centers on two concerts—the one in Liverpool, and a show held two nights earlier as a warmup in Glasgow, Scotland. The Glasgow show features a remarkable version of his huge U.K. hit, "Mull of Kintyre." In the special, McCartney and his band—which featured a pair of Scottish dary fifth Beatle George Martin, their record producer, as he explains that McCartney is donating much of the proceeds to building a new performing arts training school, modeled after the one in Fame, on the site of his alma mater, the Liverpool Institute.

But McCartney's generosity extends beyond willingness to share the wealth—it encompasses his concert itself. In other hands, the use of a John Lennon medley that features three of the greatest anthems the late Beatle wrote—"Strawberry Fields Forever," "Help," and "Give Peace a Chance"—might seem like rank exploitation. But McCartney (who freely acknowledges his frequent "barneys"—rumbling disagreements—with his old songwriting partner) turns the medley into another means of giving: He offers up to Lennon and his songs the climax of the concert.

This takes courage—McCartney has lived for years in Lennon's critical shadow. But it's also Paul's way of interpreting that music in light of his own contribution to the Beatles. For if John Lennon was the better generator of big ideas, it was McCartney who took those ideas and polished them into the biggest pop sensation history has ever known. It was part of Paul McCartney's genius-and a part of it as significant as his method of cooking up memorable melodies-that he knew just how to hook the crowd, not with trash or tripe, but with the best and noblest parts. So when the crowd at the Liverpool concert takes the music away from him, continuing to sing "Give Peace a Chance" after the band has finished with it, Paul McCartney gracefully bows to their demand, sits back down at the piano and joins them.

If gestures like this weren't why we loved the Beatles, they should have been. There was nothing cynical or calculated about Paul McCartney that night in Liverpool. He was just the biggest, luckiest Beatles fan of all—and savvy enough, as he was in 1970, to know when he'd reached a pinnacle nobody could top. So Paul McCartney: Going Home ends on a rare and exultant peak of emotion, as a kind of Beatles reunion that takes place in the only place where it still can: In our hearts and imaginations. And in his.

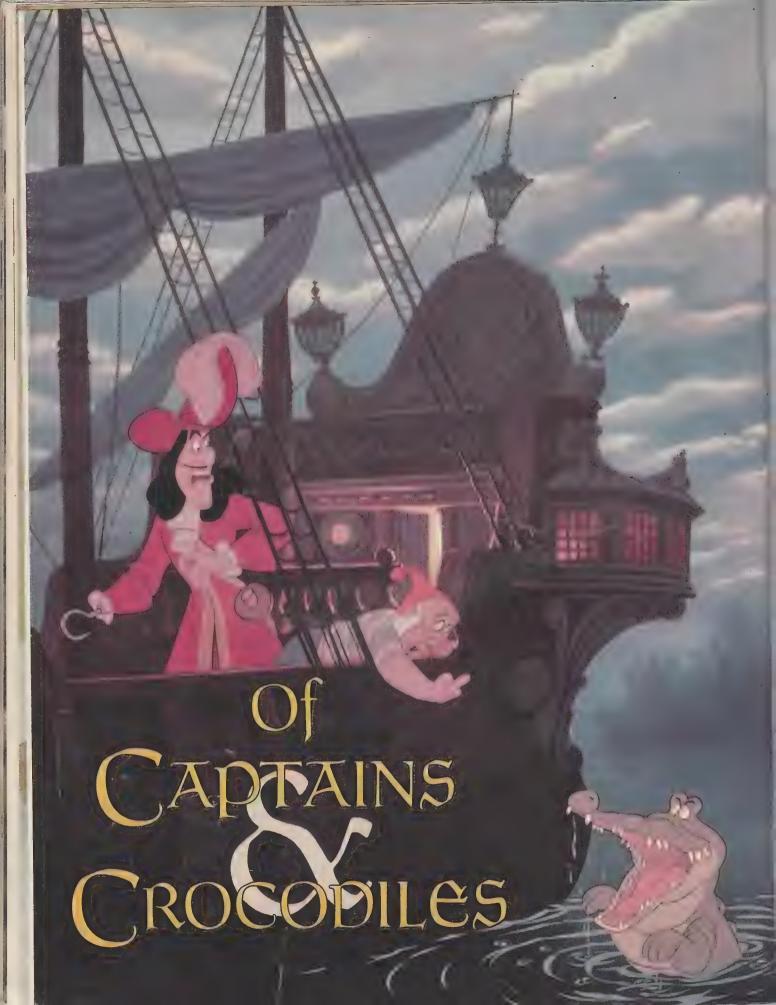

One of the most influential rock critics writing today, Dave Marsh has published books on Elvis Presley, Bruce Springsteen, and the 10001 greatest rock and soul singles ever made. He is the co-editor, with Don Henley, of Heaven Is Under Our Seat, which will be published by Walnutto Press in September.

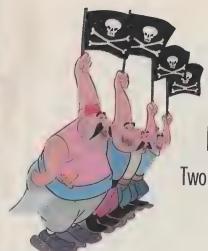

Paul McCartney's concert on King's Dock in Liverpool, his old hometown, is "a kind of Beatles reunion that takes place in the only place where it still can," notes Dave Marsh, "in our hearts and imagination . . . "

YO HO! YO HO! IT'S A PIRATE'S LIFE FOR ME!

Two of Disney's famed "nine old men" of animation reminisce about the making of Peter Pan.

n 1939, Walt Disney secured the rights to make an animated film of J.M. Barrie's classic novel and stage play Peter Pan from the Great Ormond Street Hospital in London, England. (Barrie had given the hospital the rights to his work in his will.) But securing the rights to Peter Pan marked only the first step in the long and arduous task of bringing Peter Pan to the silver screen.

"It was 11 years before it finally went into production," recalls Frank Thomas. Thomas, along with Ollie Johnston, is one of the surviving members of the group Walt called his "nine old men" of Disney animation. "He was working on it on and off," adds Ollie Johnston. "In fact, he was working on ideas for Peter Pan before he even began work on Snow White.

"It sat there for a long time," Johnston says. "Every now and then Frank and I would be called into a meeting, and it seemed at last it was going into production. Then Walt would set it aside. There were a lot of pictures made before Walt found a way to tell that story, and that wasn't unusual. Walt would wait on a project until he found the means to tell a story—and sometimes, like Alice in Wonderland—he never really found a way to tell the story."

When Peter Pan finally entered production, Walt Disney began by shooting a live-action film. Dancer Roland Dupree played Peter, and Hans Conreid, who created the voices of both Captain Hook and Wendy's father Mr. Darling, portrayed Hook. "It was a way of communicating between Walt, the director, the storymen and the animators," says Johnston. "You certainly didn't trace that stuff. But you could look at old Don Barclay playing Mr. Smee and see what worked and what didn't."

One of the crucial moments in creating Peter Pan was the casting—pairing the major characters with the animating directors. "Walt usually cast all the major roles himself," says Thomas. "He was a genius at casting. Some-to give me one more comic villain before returning me to the kid's stuff. That's how I got Captain Hook. When I heard the news, I said 'Oh boy! There's a character I can get a hold of.'" Originally Ollie Johnston was assigned to animate Wendy (a task which fell, along with animating Peter Pan, to Milt Kahl). "I was with Frank during the making of Alice," Johnston recalls. "Walt came by and looked at the story wall in Frank's office. 'Did you do all these Alices?' Walt asked me. I said yes. Walt said 'I'll do all these Alices?' Walt asked me. I said yes. Walt said 'I'll have to put you on Wendy.' Frank immediately said 'Oh, that will really kill him.' I would have hated to do Wendy after all those Alices."

"Walt shot me one of those sharp looks of his," hoots Thomas. "Zap! Zing! Zing! Zing!" But Walt reconsidered and to Johnston fell the job of animating Captain Hook's hapless first mate Mr. Smee.

The two animators were delighted with their vibrant, larger-than-life villains.

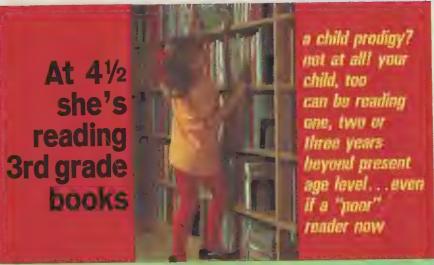

"Hook motivates the action," Thomas says, "but we had a lot of trouble with him. Some saw him as a very foppish sort of pirate, with his silks and satins and coats and hats. During the live-action film, when Hans Conreid had tried on the costumes, he struck this flamboyant pose and said, 'God! Wouldn't it be wonderful to always wear these clothes.' His wife said, 'But Darling, you always have.'

"We didn't know which direction to go in,"
Thomas adds. "Whether he should be a snarling type of villain—the old Wallace Beery character waving his hook around—or smooth and sinister and elegant. I floundered around quite a bit until I found some scenes that worked.

times he would make a choice and people would wonder, 'Why is he putting that guy on the character—he can't do that.' But Walt would see something in that person and had a way of talking to him and inspiring him. He seldom made an error."

For both Thomas and Johnston, their roles in animating Peter Pan were determined in a way that seems almost fortuitous. "I'm the 'sincere' type of animator," Thomas chuckles. "Walt had had me animate the Wicked Stepmother in Cinderella. Then on Alice in Wonderland, my big character was the Queen of Hearts. Walt thought I would see something in that character, but I never did—I couldn't see what he saw in her. So nothing came of that and Walt wasn't happy about it. But he decided Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) homelearning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden-often spectacular-improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startingly effective method.

But the further we went, the more humor we saw in the character.

"Then the storymen began putting in more humor and Walt picked up on it. It was Walt who put in those funny sequences, where Hook is chased by the crocodile after Skull Rock and crashes into it! 'Back to the ship, Mr. Smee!' Bam! And Woolie Reitherman got to do all that stuff! And here I did all the other work. But it was probably a good choice."

"I think it would have been wrong to make Hook a completely funny personality throughout the picture," says Johnston. "The audience wouldn't have taken him seriously. You had to have those sincere moments of villainy for the audience to accept the chase scene. By then it's right: who wouldn't do anything to escape from being eaten by that crocodile? It's slapstick, and it wouldn't be worth anything if it wasn't set up. By the same token, I wouldn't have handled Smee so broadly at the beginning. Smee has to be believable too-as when he rows the Little Indian Girl around or tries to get the information out of Tinker Bell. The character has to be believable for the funny bits to truly work."

Despite the success of Peter Pan, both Thomas and Johnston are convinced that, today, they could do a better job. It's not false modesty, but as Thomas puts it, "It always seemed that the last scenes of the picture were the ones where you were finally on-target with the character." "And a year later," Johnston adds, "you'd want to go back and change it all. I'd like to put more thought into what I did. If only you could see everything you were going to work on in a picture," he says, "before you did anything at all, instead of just seeing it in sequences."

"Peter Pan is a complicated story, really," sighs Thomas. "It seems so simple and direct. But who are all those characters-Nana in the nursery, the mermaids, the Indians, the lost boys and the pirates? There were lots of wonderful things you could do with those characters, but then before you knew it, there was too much of Nana. You had to try and keep things in proportion. I always would have liked more pirates, myself. But then, what would you have to give up? The mermaids, the Indians?"

Ollie Johnston points out, "Frank and I were always concerned with not doing things just to be funny. We wanted the humor to come out of the characters and the situations. Because that's the richest type of humor there is. That's the type of thing that makes animation rich. We always wanted acting, not action. That is the essence of outstanding character development on screen."
